1 INTRODUCTION

2 By his complaint, Plaintiff pursues causes of action for the alleged violation of the Unruh Civil 3 Rights Act § 51 et seq. Plaintiff doesn't allege when he visited Defendant's website
4 <https://rosenthalestatewines.com/> (the "Website"), only that he was deterred due to supposed barriers 5 on the website. Complaint, ¶¶ 4-7. He further alleges that he was supposedly deterred by Website 6 barriers including missing alternative text, empty or missing labels, multiple form labels, empty links, 7 broken slip link, broken ARIA references, broken ARIA menu, Id., ¶ 22.

9 Plaintiff seeks injunctive relief to compel defendant to take action to remediate the Website to 10 conform to his demands. Plaintiff requests affirmative injunctive relief requiring modification of the 11 Website. Compl., Prayer for Relief, ¶ 2; Compl., ¶ 31.

12 Section 51(b) of the Unruh Act provides:

13 All persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal, and no matter what 14 their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, 15 genetic information, marital status, sexual orientation, citizenship, primary language, or 16 immigration status are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, 17 facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind 18 whatsoever.

19 Section 51 does not state any remedy for the violation of access regulations. The remedies 20 for the violation of § 51 are set forth in § 52. Section 52(c)(3) provides only preventive injunctive 21 relief as a remedy for violation of § 51, not affirmative (or mandatory) injunctive relief. Preventive 22 injunctive relief applies only to maintain the status quo. Here, Plaintiff seeks to change in the status 23 quo.

24 As a matter of law, plaintiff is not entitled under the Unruh Act to injunctive relief compelling 25 defendant to take any action to modify their Website. This does not mean plaintiff is without 26 recourse to pursue mandatory injunctive relief. The Legislature enacted and amended the Disabled 27 Persons Act (DPA), Civil Code §§ 54 to 55, to provide remedies for access to places and things 28

1 open to the public and forward-looking injunctive relief similar to the remedy provided in the ADA.¹ At 2 the same time, the Legislature amended the Unruh Act, continuing its purpose to protect the 3 exercise of rights of all the classes of persons listed in § 51 from discriminatory conduct but 4 excluding from it any obligation to construct or modify Website to meet compliance with access 5 regulations. While the DPA and Unruh both concern the rights and remedies available to the 6 disabled, they co-exist on separate and different paths. As such, the allegations listed in the prayer 7 for injunctive relief should be stricken.

9 DISCUSSION

10 I.

11 A MOTION TO STRIKE MAY PROPERLY BE GRANTED BY THE COURT WHERE THE 12 ALLEGATIONS ARE IRRELEVANT OR IMPROPER

13 “The court may, upon a motion made pursuant to Section 435, or at any time in its discretion, 14 and upon terms it deems proper: [¶] (a) Strike out any irrelevant, false, or improper matter inserted in 15 any pleading. [¶] (b) Strike out all or any part of any pleading not drawn or filed in conformity with the 16 laws of this state, a court rule, or an order of the court.” Code Civ. P. § 436.

17
18 As shown below, affirmative injunctive relief cannot be pursued by Plaintiff in this action 19 because Unruh does not allow for such relief. This motion to strike is proper to remove that claim for 20 relief, which is irrelevant and an improper matter inserted in the complaint. A “motion to strike is 21 appropriate vehicle to attack allegations requesting improper relief.” Satz v. Superior Court (1990) 22 225 Cal.App.3d 1525, 1533, fn. 9. Mr. Martin must not be allowed to move forward with this improper 23 prayer for affirmative injunctive relief. If he wishes to proceed forward with this demand, he must 24 amend his complaint to utilize Disabled Persons Act, Civ. Code §54 as his cause of action and 25 subject himself to the mutual attorney’s fees provision and reduced statutory damages provisions

3 AS A MATTER OF LAW, PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO INJUNCTIVE RELIEF TO 4 REQUIRE REMEDIATION OF THE WEBSITE AS UNRUH ONLY PERMITS PREVENTIVE
5 INJUNCTIVE RELIEF; THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF ALLEGATION SHOULD BE STRICKEN

6 Civil Code § 52 provides the remedies that may be imposed for the violation of Unruh. In 7 addition to the remedy of damages contained in subdivision (a), subdivision (c) of section 52 8 provides in relevant part:

9 “Whenever there is reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is 10 engaged in conduct of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights described in 11 this section, and that conduct is of that nature and is intended to deny the full exercise 12 of those rights, ... any person aggrieved by the conduct may bring a civil action in the appropriate court by filing with it a complaint. The complaint shall contain the following:

13 “ ...
14 “ ...

15 “(3) A request for preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or 16 temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order against the person or persons 17 responsible for the conduct, as the complainant deems necessary to ensure the full 18 enjoyment of the rights described in this section.” (Emphasis added.)

19 Section 52 does not define “preventive relief.” But, preventive relief cannot be understood as the 20 affirmative relief compelling defendant to remediate Website. Civil Code § 3368 defines preventive 21 relief as relief “given by prohibiting a party from doing that which ought not to be done.”

22 Section 3368 is preceded by section 3366 which provides:

23 “Specific or preventive relief may be given as provided by the laws of this state.”

24 (Emphasis added.) “Specific relief is given: 1. By taking possession of a thing, and 25 delivering it to a claimant; 2. By compelling a party himself to do that which ought to be 26 done; or, 3. By declaring and determining the rights of parties, otherwise than by an 27 award of damages.” (Emphasis added.)

28 Section 3367. By the definition of § 3367, injunctive relief that seeks remediation and other affirmative action is specific, mandatory injunctive relief – the opposite of preventive relief.

Thus, § 3368 defines preventive or prohibitory relief for all state laws, including § 52(c) as established in the language in section 3366—“by the laws of this state.” Section 52(c)(3) only allows

1 for prohibitory injunctions.

2 The rules of statutory construction support the application of the definition in § 3368 to § 52(c) 3 (3). “[I]f a word or phrase has a particular meaning in one part of a law, we give it the same meaning 4 in other parts of the law. [Citation.]” Scottsdale Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co.
5 (2005) 130 Cal.App.4th 890, 899; see also, Balasubramanian v. San Diego Community College 6 Dist. (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 977, 988 [“We must construe identical words in different parts of the 7 same act or in different statutes relating to the same subject matter as having the same meaning”].
8 And, “enactments with the same general purpose must be construed together to achieve a uniform 9 and consistent legislative purpose, even though they may have been enacted at different times.”
10 Klarfeld v. Berg (1981) 29 Cal.3d 893, 901.

11 Thus, preventive relief in § 52(c)(3) means prohibitory injunctive relief as defined by § 3368.
12 This conclusion also follows from case authority. The Supreme Court has explained, “As a general 13 rule, we think we may say that when the injunction merely grants preventive relief it is prohibitive, but 14 when it directly or indirectly grants affirmative relief it is mandatory.” Ohaver v. Fenech (1928) 206 15 Cal. 118, 122. ““It is a generally accepted principle that in adopting legislation the Legislature is 16 presumed to have had knowledge of existing domestic judicial decisions and to have enacted and 17 amended statutes in the light of such decisions as have a direct bearing upon them. [Citations.]” 18 [Citations.] [Citations.]” Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 820, 854.
19 Ohaver additionally defines preventive relief as prohibitory injunctive relief. The Legislature is 20 presumed to know the Supreme Court’s definition of preventive relief and to have intended that 21 meaning in § 52(c).

22 Preventive relief does not include physical changes to the Website or the affirmative 23 obligations that plaintiff seeks as the order from this Court. The court in Davenport v. Blue Cross of 24 California (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 435 provides analysis of the difference between a prohibitory 25
26 27 28

1 injunction and a mandatory injunction. In that case, the plaintiff secured an order requiring Blue 2 Cross to pay certain claims. The Court of Appeal rejected plaintiff's contention that the preliminary 3 injunction issued by the trial court was prohibitory, not mandatory:

5 "[T]he general rule is that an injunction is prohibitory if it requires a person to refrain 6 from a particular act and mandatory if it compels performance of an affirmative act that 7 changes the position of the parties. [Citations.] The substance of the injunction, not the 8 form, determines whether it is mandatory or prohibitory. [Citation.]

9 "Blue Cross argues the preliminary injunction in this case, though framed in 10 prohibitory language, was mandatory because it required Blue Cross to perform 11 affirmative acts of authorizing and paying for the treatment, thereby changing the 12 status quo. Plaintiff argues it was merely a prohibitory injunction because it enjoined 13 Blue Cross from persisting in an anticipatory breach of its contract, which threatened 14 plaintiff's 'very existence,' and her health was the 'status quo' which required 15 preservation.

16 "We agree with Blue Cross. The injunction plainly ordered Blue Cross to 17 perform affirmative acts which would change the position of the parties, by compelling 18 Blue Cross to authorize and pay for plaintiff's treatment. It has been held an injunction 19 which compels a party to perform some physical act or surrender property is 20 mandatory. [Citation.]..."

21 Id. at 446-447, citing Kettenhofen v. Superior Court of Marin County (1961) 55 Cal.2d 189, 191.

22 In this case, Plaintiff seeks an injunction requiring defendant to affirmatively alter (remediate)
23 the Website to conform to Plaintiff's demands including changing various aspects of the Website 24 including text, links, and labels. Compl., ¶ 22. He seeks mandatory injunctive relief. Davenport v.
25 Blue Cross of California, supra. Section 52(c)(3) does not permit the mandatory injunction sought by 26 Plaintiff. As seen recently in this court on January 20, 2023, in Brian Whitaker v Hugo Boss Retail 27 Inc., defendant's motion to strike plaintiff's mandatory injunctive relief was granted by the court 28 following the exact arguments that Defendant brings today.

29 "Plaintiff seeks Defendant to remove all presently existing architectural barriers as 30 required by the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Unruh Civil Rights Act, obtain 31 biennial Certified Access Specialist architectural inspections of the subject facility to 32 verify on-going ADA compliance and follow those inspection's recommendations of all 33 readily achievable barrier removal, and implementation of accessibility [*9] policies 34 and requiring annual employee training on providing full and equal access to clients or 35 customers with disabilities. (Compl. Prayer ¶¶1-3.) This is mandatory injunctive relief, 36 not preventive relief."

1 Whitaker v. Hugo Boss Retail, 2023 Cal. Super. LEXIS 14327, *9. Similarly in Shayler, the court 2 agrees that,

3 “Section 52 does not define the term “preventive relief.” However, Civil Code § 3368 4 states: “Preventive relief is given by prohibiting a party from doing that which ought not 5 to be done.” (Bold Added.) The Court concludes that it is proper to apply the Civil Code 6 § 3368 definition as providing the meaning of “preventive relief” in Civil Code § 52.
7 (See, Balasubramanian v. San Diego Community College Dist. (2000) 80 8 Cal.App.4th 977, 988 [“We must construe identical words in different parts of the same 9 act or in different statutes relating to the same subject matter as having the same 10 meaning”].) Where, as here, the Legislature has chosen to use a statutorily defined 11 term, the Court must assume that the Legislature intended that the courts use that 12 statutory definition in construing this statute. Therefore, the Court shall apply the 13 definition provided by Civil Code § 3368.”

14 see also, Whitaker v. Fed. Express Corp., 2023 Cal. Super. LEXIS 3910 (LA Sup. Ct. Feb. 9, 2023)
15 (Moreton, J.).

16 Further, in Whitaker v California Pizza Kitchen, Inc., the court found yet again that the Unruh 17 Act does not allow for mandatory injunctive relief,

18 “Applying the definition of section 3368 to the express language of section 52(c) leads 19 the Court to conclude that section 52(c) permits a plaintiff to seek a prohibitory 20 injunction requiring a defendant to refrain from a particular act but does not authorize 21 the imposition of mandatory injunctive relief that compels the performance of an 22 affirmative act that changes the position of the parties.”

23 Whitaker v. Cal. Pizza Kitchen, 2023 Cal. Super. LEXIS 30687, *8. Finally, in a very recent Order 24 given on July 12, 2023, in Fernandez v. Bellfower Liquor Alhosry, Inc., the court found that plaintiff 25 could not seek mandatory injunctive relief based on § 52(c), 26 “The Court thus finds the reference to “preventative relief” in section 52 as relief which 27 prohibits a party from doing that which ought not to be done. Thus, applying the 28 definition of section 3368 to the express language of section 52(c), CC § 52(c) permits a plaintiff to seek a prohibitory injunction requiring a defendant to refrain from a particular act but does not authorize the imposition of mandatory injunctive relief that compels the performance of an affirmative act that changes the position of the parties.

Therefore, Plaintiff may not seek a mandatory injunction such as the ones included in his prayer for relief.”

Fernandez v. Bellfower Liquor Alhosry, Inc., Case No. 22NWCV01248 (LA Superior Court July 12, 1 2023). As seen above, courts have repeatedly found that Plaintiff’s request for mandatory injunctive 2 relief is improper under § 52(c), as such, the motion to strike should be granted as a matter of 3 course.

5 III.

6 IF THE COURT HAS ANY DOUBT “PREVENTIVE” RELIEF CANNOT REQUIRE 7 MODIFICATION OF WEBSITE, THE PLAIN MEANING OF §51(D) AND § 52(G) OF UNRUH
8 DEMONSTRATE A WEBSITE OWNER CANNOT BE ORDERED TO MODIFY WEBSITE

9 Section 51(d) and section 52(g) plainly establish that the Unruh Act does not require 10 construction or modification of Website in any way:

11 “(d) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require any construction, 12 alteration, repair, structural or otherwise, or modification of any sort 13 whatsoever, beyond that construction, alteration, repair, or modification that is 14 otherwise required by other provisions of law, to any new or existing establishment, 15 facility, building, improvement, or any other structure, nor shall anything in this section 16 be construed to augment, restrict, or alter in any way the authority of the State 17 Architect to require construction, alteration, repair, or modifications that the State 18 Architect otherwise possesses pursuant to other laws.” [Quoting section 51]

19 * **

20 “(g) This section does not require any construction, alteration, repair, 21 structural or otherwise, or modification of any sort whatsoever, beyond that 22 construction, alteration, repair, or modification that is otherwise required by other 23 provisions of law, to any new or existing establishment, facility, building, improvement, 24 or any other structure, nor does this section augment, restrict, or alter in any way the 25 authority of the State Architect to require construction, alteration, repair, or 26 modifications that the State Architect otherwise possesses pursuant to other laws.”
27 [Quoting section 52.]

28 (Emphasis added.)

29 The plain words of sections 51(d) and 52(g) state that the Unruh Act does not require 30 construction, alteration, repair, structural or otherwise, or modification of any kind in any building or 31 facility. This language can be directly applied to websites as well, because Plaintiff is demanding 32 there be physical alterations to Defendant’s Website. “If [as here] the statutory language is 33 unambiguous, we presume the Legislature meant what it said, and the plain meaning of the statute 34 controls.” Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal.4th 876, 888. “The plain

1 meaning of the words of a statute may be disregarded only when the application of their literal 2 meaning would inevitably (1) produce absurd consequences which the Legislature clearly did not 3 intend or (2) frustrate the manifest purposes which appear from the provisions of the legislation when 4 considered as a whole in light of its legislative history.”

6 Faria v. San Jacinto Unified Sch. Dist. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1939, 1945.

7 Limiting the remedy in Unruh to preventive (not mandatory) relief is neither absurd nor a 8 frustration of the purpose. Rather, the limitation on injunctive relief is by design because the 9 Legislature enacted the DPA for the purpose of providing access to websites. Unruh does not so 10 provide by the express legislative language in §§ 51 and 52.

11 IV.

12 CALIFORNIA LAW DOES NOT RECOGNIZE “TESTER” STANDING

14 Plaintiff states in his Complaint, ¶ 8 that he went to Defendant’s Website as a “tester”, 15 basically as an advocate for the civil rights of disabled persons to verify whether Defendants comply 16 with the ADA and the UCRA.”

17 In Thurston v. Omni Hotels Management (2021) 69 Cal.App.5th 299, just like in the present 18 case, plaintiff set forth conclusory allegations that she intended to “avail herself to the good and 19 services” of the hotels’ website. See Compl., ¶ 8. However, the jury returned a verdict against her 20 because it did not find that she had not used the website “for the purpose of making a hotel 21 reservation (or to ascertain Omni’s prices and accommodations for the purpose of considering 22 whether to make a hotel reservation).” Id. at 305. On appeal, plaintiff alleged that her motivation for 23 visiting the website was irrelevant, and the court disagreed.

25 While the court acknowledged that the protections under the URCA are broad, “at the same 26 time, ...a plaintiff cannot sue for discrimination in the abstract but must actually suffer the 27 discriminatory conduct.” Thurston v. Omni, supra, 69 Cal.App.5th at 306. “In essence, an individual 28

1 plaintiff has standing under the Act if he or she has been the victim of the defendant's discriminatory 2 act. (Citations omitted.) 'Plaintiff must be able to allege injury – that is, some 'invasion of the 3 plaintiff's legally protected interests.'" Id. (Emphasis in original.) "Put another way, the [Unruh Act] is 4 'confined to discriminations against recipients of the 'business establishment's ... goods, services or 5 facilities.' [Citation.] [Unruh Act] claims are thus 'appropriate where the plaintiff was in a relationship 6 with the offending organization similar to that of the customer in the customer-proprietor 7 relationship.'" Id. (Emphasis in original) The court in Thurston specifically held that the motivation for 8 visiting the covered public accommodation is relevant to the merits of the claim and relied on 9 Blumhorst v. Jewish Family Services of Los Angeles (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 993, 1000, as legal 10 support. Id. at 309.

13 Persons who are not actually aggrieved, meaning they do not suffer a particular harm 14 because they were never truly denied the services of the business do not have standing to bring a 15 claim. Blumhorst v. Jewish Family Services of Los Angeles (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 993, 998.
16 "Standing 'goes to the existence of a cause of action.'" Id. at 1000. "A person who invokes the 17 judicial process lacks standing if he, or those whom he properly represents, 'does not have a real 18 interest in the ultimate adjudication because [he] has neither suffered nor is about to suffer any injury 19 of sufficient magnitude reasonably to assure that all of the relevant facts and issues will be 20 adequately presented.'" Id. at 1001. "California decisions ... generally require a plaintiff to have a 21 personal interest in the litigation's outcome." Id.

23 "Unruh Act claims are thus 'appropriate where the plaintiff was in a relationship with the 24 offending organization similar to that of the customer in the customer-proprietor relationship.' 25 (Citation.)" Smith v. BP Lubricants USA Inc. (2021) 64 Cal. App. 5th 138, 149; See also Alcorn v.
26 Anbro Eng'g, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 500 "[T]here is no indication that the Legislature intended to 27 broaden the scope of section 51 to include discriminations other than those made by a 'business 28

1 establishment' in the course of furnishing goods, services or facilities to its clients, patrons or 2 customers. (Emphasis added.)]

3 While Plaintiff relies on the portion Civ. Code § 51(f) to incorporate a claim under the ADA into 4 his claim under the UCRA, "tester" standing is not allowed under California state law. "This does not 5 mean we must look to federal law to determine whether a plaintiff has standing to recover monetary 6 damages." Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1219. "Rather, the differences in the 7 standing requirements of the ADA and [California law] are apparent based on the plain language of 8 the relevant statutes." Id. Under California law,

10 "A disabled individual has standing to recover monetary damages if he or she was 11 actually denied equal access to a public place. Under the ADA, a disabled individual 12 has standing to seek an injunction to stop or prevent future harm from a discriminatory 13 condition in a public place, whether or not he or she has actually been denied equal 14 access to a public place. Because the requirements are obviously different, we must 15 look to California law on the issue of standing, as well as to the specific statutory 16 language... to determine whether plaintiff in this case has standing to maintain a cause 17 of action against defendants.

18 Under California law, a plaintiff generally has standing if he or she is able to allege 19 some invasion of a legally protected interest. (Angelucci v. Century Supper Club 20 (2007) 41 Cal.4th 160, 175, 59 Cal.Rptr.3d 142, 158 P.3d 718 (Angelucci).) However, 21 '[s]tanding rules for actions based upon statute may vary according to the intent of the 22 Legislature and the purpose of the enactment.' (Ibid.) In Angelucci, our Supreme Court 23 granted review to consider the issue of standing on a claim for damages brought under 24 section 52, subdivision (a), of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (Angelucci, at pp. 164–165, 25 59 Cal.Rptr.3d 142, 158 P.3d 718.) The purpose of the Unruh Civil Rights Act is similar 26 to that of the DPA—it protects an individual's right to 'full and equal access' to 'all 27 business establishments.' (Angelucci, at p. 167, 59 Cal.Rptr.3d 142, 158 P.3d 718.)
28 In reaching its decision in Angelucci, our Supreme Court stated as follows: '[A] plaintiff must have standing to bring an action under the Act. We do not dispute the Court of Appeal's admonition that 'a plaintiff cannot sue for discrimination in the abstract, but must actually suffer the discriminatory conduct.' In general terms, in order to have standing, the plaintiff must be able to allege injury—that is, some 'invasion of the plaintiff's legally protected interests.' In essence, an individual plaintiff has standing under the Act if he or she has been the victim of the defendant's discriminatory act."

Id. at 1219-1220.

The DPA and the URCA have "significant areas of overlapping application" and therefore an analysis of the DPA applies to the URCA as well. Munson v. Del Taco,

1 Inc., 46 Cal.4th 661, 675, and see fn. 10 (2009). “Our view [is] that standing 2requires something more than mere awareness of or a reasonable belief about the 3 existence of a discriminatory condition.”

4 Reycraft v. Lee, supra, 177 Cal. App. 4th at 1221.

5 “In sum, [the DPA] imposes the standing requirement that the plaintiff have suffered 6 an actual denial of equal access before any suit for damages can be brought.... [A] 7 plaintiff cannot recover damages under section 54.3 unless the violation actually 8 denied him or her access to some public facility. Plaintiff’s attempt to equate a denial 9 of equal access with the presence of a violation of federal or state regulations would 10 nullify the standing requirement of [the DPA], since any disabled person could sue for 11 statutory damages whenever he or she encountered noncompliant facilities, regardless 12 of whether that lack of compliance actually impaired the plaintiff’s access to those 13 facilities. Plaintiff’s argument would thereby eliminate any distinction between a cause 14 of action for equitable relief under section 55 and a cause of action for damages 15 under” California law.

16 Id. at 1223.

17 Simply put, in California, “testers” do not have standing. This is a logical conclusion as if 18 someone has a “bona fide intent” to patronize the business then they have a “real interest in the 19 ultimate adjudication.” Thurston v. Omni Hotels Management, supra, 69 Cal.App.5th at 299. If the 20 purpose of the visit to the business website is simply to “test” it, there is no “bona fide intent” to use 21 the services. Therefore, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure §§ 435(b)(i) and 436, Plaintiff’s tester 22 allegations in ¶ 8 that set forth “tester” motivations, should be stricken.

23 V.

24 THIS COMPLAINT SHOULD BE RECLASSIFIED TO LIMITED JURISDICTION

25 A defendant “may file a motion for reclassification within the time allowed for that party to 26 respond to the initial pleading. The court, on its own motion, may reclassify a case at any time.” See 27 Leonard v. Superior Court (2015) 237 Cal. App. 4th 34, 43; Ytuarte v. Superior Court (2005) 129 28 Cal. App. 4th 266, 268. If the Court strikes ¶¶ 31-32 and the Prayer at ¶¶ 1-3, then this matter should be reclassified as a Limited Jurisdiction matter as the amount in controversy is only a maximum of $4,000.00.

1 CONCLUSION

2 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff's claim and allegations for mandatory injunctive relief 3 pursuant to the Unruh Act must be stricken and the case reclassified as a Limited Jurisdiction matter.
